Millionaires Fight.

Bitter battles between men of millions on the floor of the Stock Exchange are every day occurrences, but a real old-fashioned fight between two world-famous millionaires is a decided novelty. John W. Mackay, the Bonanza King, and C. W. Bonny, a millionaire, who was once Mackay's broker, came together in the Nevada Bank in San Francisco on Tuesday in a style that has roused the whole country and part of Europe. They had a fist encounter that will pass down to history.

The authentic history of the fight has its humorous side, and also its pathetic one. It was not about any of those things which ordinary agitators western men; not about millions, nor banks, nor about religious opinion, nor the relative merits of a straight flush and four of a kind. It's all about society. These two successful men, having piled up their millions under the fostering wing of the American eagle, have transported their families to London, and there, hanging desperately to the tufted end of the British flag, they have fought each other, each striving to break the other's hold and at the same time to attract to himself the attention of high London society.

Recently an article in a London paper or less seriously upon the Bonny family was published in a New York society paper, and it was alleged that it emanated from the Mackays. A week later numerous anonymous publications regarding Mr. Mackay appeared in a certain English society paper which was attributed to the Bonny family. The latter were simply rebuses of the many stories told of Mrs. Mackay's early life, all of which are familiar to the public.
There is no proof that Mrs. Mackay ever suffered by the attacks made upon her. But the Bonny's were not so fortunate.

Miss Virginia Darrel Bonny was engaged, according to common report, to be married to Lord Cantelup, son and heir of Earl De La Warr. One fine morning the London mail carriers delivered to everybody in London society a marked copy of a paper dealing with the history of the Bonny's, a paper that Miss Bonny was the child of a convict, during whose impris-ment Miss Bonny's mother and married her present husband. Upon receiving his copy the panic-stricken Earl De La Warr, in true British fashion, started his heir, Lord Cantelup, off on a voyage around the world.
When he came back he married some other girl, since which time he has been drowned in his yacht at sea.

This bit of reminiscence, coupled with the fact that Mrs. Mackay and Madame Bonny are bitter social rivals in England and that the Bonanza King has been worsted in a financial deal with his former broker in America, plainly shows the why and wherefore of Tuesday's fight. Bonny was engaged with business topics, the uppermost of which were Nevada Bank affairs and the new cable opposition to the Bennett-Mackay line that Bonny is thought to be promoting. The knob of the door was turned and Mr. Mackay entered. His eyes fell on Hel-man's visitor, and in a moment Mackay had sprung forward and Bonny saw stars almost as soon as he saw the Bonanza King; for the old Nevada landed a terrible right-hander, with clinched fist, on the left cheek of the ex-broker.

The blow was a staggerer, from its force and coming so unexpectedly, and without a word of warning. Its effect in this direction was double. Bonny, being in the act of facing about was not very well poised, and was knocked about the wall and into a heap on the floor.

It was not a scientific set-to. If it had been the battle would probably have all gone Mackay's way, for he still preserves much of the agility of his early days, when he was able to whip half the miners over whom he acted as superintendent.

In the wild rally on the floor, Bonny's superior height, reach and bulk told in his favor. It took him nearly a minute to quit trying to defend himself and resort to attack in kind, and during this time Mackay showered blows on him whenever Bonny's tight embrace allowed him the use of his hands.

Bonny's first return was in the nature of a butt with his head full into Mackay's face. The top of his cranium landed with force enough to have stopped any man whose blood was up at least once, but it only seemed to raise the ire of Mackay still higher, and he continued to fight on even more desperate than before.

All over the private office that two millionaires rolled in a most undignified manner, paying not the slightest heed to ring rules or to overturned chairs, ornaments, desks, or freely blowing ink bottles.

They were finally separated, and the witnesses, all employees of the bank, agree that it was the best fight they had witnessed since Jim Corbett left the institution.

MEDICINAL.

Take
Simmons
Liver
Regulator
One Dose
WORTH
100 Dollars

Dear S. L. R.—Friends: I consider one dose of Simmons Liver Regulator worth $100. I was constipated, had headache, could eat nothing with satisfaction, my appetite had blown and felt altogether out of sorts. I resorted to blue mass, calomel, quinine and all remedies suggested, but only obtained temporary relief. One dose of S. L. R. did me more good than the $100 worth of doctors and doctoring. Respectfully, T. C. MARLEY

I have been a teacher for twenty years, and during that time have had repeated attacks of headache, produced by torpid liver, and I have been entirely cured by the use of Simmons Liver Regulator. I found it to be of so mild a character in its action as not to interfere in the least with my duties in the school room. To those similarly situated and subject to same, I cannot too highly recommend Simmons Liver Regulator. A. E. CHEEK, Campbellville, Ky.
